GLENDALE AND THEREABOUTS

Information for the Inquiring Stranger and Others—Where and What It Is—A Bit of Its History and a Hint of Its Future

LOCATION.

Tropico joins the northern boundary of the City of Los Angeles, distant about five miles in a direct line from the court house in that city. Glendale adjoins Tropico on the north (the city limits six miles distant in an air line from the Los Angeles court house), while Casa Verdugo lies at the base of the mountains, at the end of the Pacific Electric car line north of and adjoining Glendale—with West and North Glendale practically part of the same settlement, lying west of the Pacific Electric road.

The elevation of Glendale above sea level is six hundred feet, while Tropico is about 100 feet lower. Casa Verdugo is situated at the base of the mountain and from that point a trail runs to the summit, where the elevation is about 3800 feet.

CAR SERVICE.

The car service is excellent. On the west side of the city is the Pacific Electric line, cars running on half-hourly schedules between the depot at Sixth and Main streets, Los Angeles, and Glendale. The service on this line is unexcelled on any of the suburban lines connecting with Los Angeles, the actual running time is twenty-five minutes. Single fare 15 cents, round trips 25 cents; ten rides for one dollar; commutation rate 7.7-10 cents. On the east side of the city an electric car line has recently been completed connecting Glendale with Eagle Rock (two miles distant), and at that point connecting with the cars of the Los Angeles Electric railroad company to Los Angeles. Round trip fare between Glendale and Los Angeles by this route is 25 cents with transfer privileges in Los Angeles. The main line of the Southern Pacific company between Los Angeles and San Francisco passes through Tropico, which is the first station on the road north of Los Angeles. The San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railway company owns a steam road running through Tropico and Glendale to Verdugo Canon, two miles above Glendale. At present only freight traffic is handled on this line, but that is considerable, as Glendale has four packing houses where oranges and lemons are being handled all the year round and a great many car loads of these and of deciduous fruits leave the valley yearly by the Salt Lake company's line. That this line will soon be converted into an electric road is confidently expected.

MAIL SERVICE AND STREETS.

Free delivery of mail matter went into effect in Glendale and portions of Tropico on February 1st, when Glendale, for postal purposes, passed under control of the Los Angeles post office. This service is gradually being extended so as to take in every portion of the city and considerable of the contiguous territory.

Beginning at First street, which is near the city's north boundary, the numbered streets run east and west, the city limits on the south being halfway between Ninth and Tenth streets. Beginning at Adams street, the streets running north and south on the west are named in alphabetical order, the next west of Adams being Belmont, the next Cedar, etc., the last street so named being Orange street; next beyond which is Central avenue, the western boundary of the city.

The original townsite of Glendale (laid out in 1887), comprised the territory between Adams street and Mary street and between First and Seventh streets, and the most of the recent development of the city has been west of Adams street. (A street map is to be found in the back part of the book).

SCHOOLS.

Glendale has within the city limits two well equipped grammar schools, employing ten teachers, and just west of the city is the West Glendale school with three teachers. A new $60,000 Union High School is now being erected, the first High School building, having been outgrown. The faculty comprises six teachers. Tropico has a new grammar school building with six teachers.

CHURCHES.

Glendale is well supplied with churches. The following denominations have places of worship here: Adventist, Baptist, Catholic, Christian, Episcopal, Methodist and Presbyterian.

ORGANIZATIONS.

Social and Fraternal organizations are well represented. Among the ladies clubs are the Tuesday Afternoon Club, the Maids and Matrons and the P. E. O.'s. The lodges meeting in Glendale are the Masons, Odd Fellows, K. of P., Foresters, Fraternal Brotherhood, Fraternal Union and Good Templars. The W. C. T. U. and various church societies are all growing in numbers and influence. The Glendale Country Club has a $12,000 club house, over a hundred members, and is an important factor in the social life of the city.

POPULATION.

The population of Glendale City is about twenty-five hundred, while that of Tropico, West and North Glendale and Casa Verdugo combined, is about the same, making a total of 5000 people within a radius of two and a half miles. This is increasing very rapidly, the number of new houses being erected all over this section indicating a doubling of this population within the next three years.

HISTORICAL.

Originally, under a grant from the crown of Spain given about the time of the revolutionary war, the Rancho San Rafael, comprising about three square leagues, became the property of the Verdugo family. Between 1868 and 1870 several large portions of it passed into the possession of Glassell, Childs, Hellman, Beaudry, Ross, Thom Hunter and others. Not much development of this section occurred until 1883 when Wright, Wicks, Watts, Hodgkins and others bought one or two large tracts and subdivided, bringing in settlers who rapidly made improvements, planting out large acreage to orchards and vineyards. In 1883 Messrs. Byram, Patterson and Phelon bought 126 acres of the Childs tract, lying along the east side of what is now Glendale avenue, between First and Ninth streets. The price paid by them was $135 per acre and the land was nearly all in sage brush, with patches here and there that had been cleared and sowed to barley. They improved their holdings, selling several small tracts to others who came in and formed with them the nucleus of the Glendale of today. In 1886, while the great land "boom" prevailed in Southern California, the three men named and a few others, H. J. Crow for one (then owner of Lomita Park), brought into being the town of Glendale, a map of which was published in January, 1887. During the last named year the Terminal Railroad company (now the Salt Lake) built its road through Glendale to Verdugo Park. About the same time the Glendale Hotel (now Sanitarium) was built a weekly paper was started and for a few months Glendale grew rapidly. Then came the collapse of the boom—the speculators lost their money very generally, but the real home builders held on to their health, planted orchards, raised fruit and poultry and lived in hopes. In 1903 Messrs. Thom and Ross sold a large tract of land on the west side to L. C. Brand and H. E. Huntington and to develop that property the electric road, now a part of the Pacific Electric system, was built in 1904, being completed in July of that year, the occasion being celebrated by a grand barbecue of a half dozen beeves and exercises in the porch of the Glendale hotel building. The effect of the building of this road putting this section in close contact with Los Angeles, was immediate and from that time to this there has been a constant influx of home builders into this portion of the great San Fernando valley. The great growth of the City of Glendale, however, dates from the time of its incorporation, February 7th, 1906. Since that time twenty miles of streets have been improved by the petrolium process, costing approximately $140,000, most of which has been paid for, there being only about $25,000 of bonds for this work outstanding. The city voted a bond issue of $5000 for a fire department (the bonds selling for about $6000) and has a brick fire building and complete apparatus for extinguishing fires. On Brand boulevard there is almost a solid street block of brick business structures, nearly all two stories, while on Glendale avenue and Fourth street three two-story brick blocks have been erected within the past six months.

Two of the roads to be built by the Los Angeles highway commission out through Glendale and when completed will put Glendale and Tropico on the route to be followed by the grand system of highways that is to lead from the mountains of San Bernardino county to the sea. The Owens river water system will be led through the San Fernando valley to Los Angeles, passing through this immediate section.

ADVANTAGES CLAIMED.

This portion of the San Fernando valley claims as its first asset, its close proximity to Los Angeles. It appears to the home builder particularly on this account, as it affords him all the advantages of both city and country only a little more than half an hour of time spans the distance between the city and the mountains. This fact appeals not only to the person of leisure but also to the tiller of the soil or the person who in any avenue of usefulness produces that which he needs to find a market for—and who realizes the immense advantages of finding that market near at hand. Another feature of this section which is not generally found, is its infinite variety. Within a limited radius there exists notable gradations of soil, climate, scenery. A portion is entirely frostless while the soil may be adapted to the cultivation of the citrus fruits, while another part not far removed may be subject to more or less frost with a soil where certain trees and crops will do well without irrigation. One portion of the valley may be protected from the ocean breezes while another is subject to it whenever it blows. But over all is the warmth of all the invigorating atmosphere of the semi-tropics—not the Italy of our dreams with a glorious past, but the California of today with a present of wonderful attainment and a future that is gilded with all the brightness that the optimist can mix in his colors.

A SPECIMEN OF GOOD HOUSE BUILDING.

One often hears the criticism made of our California building of houses that the work is not done as thoroughly as is the practice in the East. As there is no doubt some cause for this statement. We do occasionally, however, find a house which is built by the owner, himself a good workman, which is an exception to this rule, if rule it is. Mr. C. O. Rich has just completed a six-room residence at 513 Jackson street, which for finished workmanship challenges comparison with the best. Every detail has been worked out with an eye single to the accomplishment of the best possible results and Mr. Rich, who is a carpenter of long experience and unusually skillful in his calling, has reason for the pride which he takes in the house he has built. The porch has a floor of solid concrete and the woodwork is finished in a style denoting as great care as has been expended upon the interior. The front door is made upon design original with the builder, the upper half consisting of two neat fitting windows hinged in the sides. The door opens into a spacious reception hall separated from a living room by an archway which is the principal feature observed upon entering. This is crowned with an elliptic panel just below but not connecting with the ceiling and running from side to side. The boards comprising the ceiling were selected with great care in regard to attractive grain, and being put together by tongue and groove, present an appearance of a solid surface, the beautiful grain of the wood being accented by a rich mahogany stain. The wainscoting of the same selected material rises five feet above the floor and the wall above it is covered with a fine paper of artistic and attractive design in imitation of the foliage of a spring time forest. A comfortable looking fire place and mantel composed of brick from the Tropico Tile factory is the feature of the north side of the room. The floor of hard wood is put together in the log-cabin or herring-bone style and the joints are as perfect as the hand of artisan in wood can make them. The beam ceiling over all is also noticeable for the invisibility of joints and the fine grain of the wood. The buffet in the dining room is a fine piece of workmanship, with ratchet shelves, flint glass, highly polished boards with invisible joints and drawers that slide noiselessly in or out. In the front room on the north side there is also a beam ceiling ornamented by unusually fine burnt work. The bedroom in the rear of this is finished in dainty papering of pink with a rich rose border at the top and a less ornate border at the bottom. The warmth of the design is intended to offset the comparative absence of sunshine on that side of the house and is most effectual. On the south side, on the contrary, the bedroom walls are finished in blue, the ceiling being cream color. The kitchen and bath room are furnished to correspond with the rest of the house, everything being complete and the best obtainable in quality and workmanship. The trimmings of the light rooms are of nickel while those of the dark finished rooms are brass. Mr. Rich announces that on Tuesday and Wednesday next he will keep open house in the afternoons and will be pleased to have his friends call and inspect his house.

GLENDALE, CAL., APRIL 24, 1909

Prof. Percival Lowell wants twenty million dollars to enable him to communicate with Mars; and Camille Flammarion has a plan for a hole in the ground which he calls a "geothermal well," to be dug down toward the antipodes as far as possible. Between these two schemes and a few expeditions to be sent out in search of the earth's poles, it looks as if the wealthy devotees of science would have a chance to get rid of their dollars.

SPECIAL GRAND JURY REPORT.

The final report of the special grand jury of Los Angeles county states among other things that neither the proprietor of the Evening Express nor the regular grand jury were successful in unearthing proofs of the actual passing of bribe money, and in reference to the matter concludes as follows:

"We find that this information was not secured, and we believe could not have been secured, during the session of the last grand jury, by reason of the conditions before referred to."

This is interesting in view of the fact that a minority of six members of the regular grand jury were commanded by a portion of the press of Los Angeles and a lot of well meaning citizens for making a report reflecting upon the majority of their associates.

Even in the same issue that publishes this report, the Los Angeles Express takes occasion to refer to the "public spirited six" who were willing to accuse without evidence.

All of which goes to show that "flub dub" may still obtain entrance into the editorial page of a highly moral reform newspaper!

THE NEW TARIFF BILL.

The new tariff bill is now up before the senate for action and will no doubt be amended in some important particulars. It will probably be a surprise to a great many people who have not given the subject much attention to learn that the effect of the revised bill will be to increase instead of decrease the revenues. This will be brought about by an increase in the duty on articles that are usually considered luxuries, and by the substitution of specific for ad valorem duties. The ad valorem system so generally the basis of computation in the Dingley bill, was a standing temptation for under valuation and no doubt a prolific source of perjury. If the senate would put sugar on the free list and could compel the lower house to concur, it would do much toward removing from the public mind the impression that that body represents the "special interests," among which is the sugar trust. Notwithstanding the fact that such action would be of direct benefit to the eighty million sugar consumers in the United States, however, the state of California would be one of the first to rush in with protests in favor of that precious beet sugar industry of ours and against any reduction of duty upon the article imported.

REGARDING THE OPENING OF STREETS.

The opening up of Grand avenue in Los Angeles from Temple street northward, has been delayed for two years by the protests of certain property owners who did not favor the project and tied it up in the courts. A decision was rendered the other day in favor of the city, and the extension of the street will be made. The protestants will now receive the price for their property to be condemned, at the figure fixed upon at the time of protest, which is considerably less than it is worth now. This case possesses some interest for our people in Glendale because of the fact that some of the streets which it is necessary to have opened or improved here, will necessitate condemnation suits, on account of the refusal of property owners to assent to such improvements. In the Los Angeles case there were indisputable damages inflicted upon the land of certain persons; but in Glendale the conditions are different and it is doubtful whether in any instance actual damage can be proved. In the event of condemnation proceedings, it will be for a jury to determine the relative measure of damages and benefits, and there is but little doubt that in most instances the latter will be thought to equal if not exceed the former. It will be unwise, we believe for property owners to stand in the way of needed improvements for the chances are against their receiving any large sums in the way of monetary consideration. And as in one or two cases the need is pressing, we hope that the city trustees will push matters vigorously so that the few additional streets needed may be speedily opened and those to be straightened or widened, may be so improved with the least possible delay.

A GROWING SUBJECT.

A great many people besides Prof. Osler have noticed that young men are superior to older ones, mentally and otherwise. It is an obtrusive fact, particularly at certain seasons of the year—about the end of June, for instance, when the knowledge acquired during the year at school is crystallized into chunks of wisdom and served out for the delectation of an admiring world. It was long ago recognized by the poet who told us that "the child is father to the man." Now comes the scientific statistician with evidence that is indisputable. He tells us that the American college athlete of today is a much larger man than his father was and is growing more so. The average height of the Yale athlete is an inch and a half more than it was five years ago and he is still growing. He is 22 pounds heavier than his predecessors of a previous generation. An examination of Harvard students made last year by Prof. Sargent showed that they were an inch taller and four or five pounds heavier than the student of thirty years ago. While this may be generally looked upon as evidence of progress, we see therein serious cause for alarm. It has taken the Yale athlete only five years to gain an inch and a half; it is not sensational speculation merely but a very simple mathematical certainty, that in twenty-five years the Yale athlete will be able to stand on the ground and eat his meals off the roof, instead of the mantelpiece as he now does on occasions immediately succeeding a strenuous football game. Indeed, at the rate of progress which we are moving this probable increase in the college man's stature is penitently conservative, and opens up a vista of depressing possibilities for everybody except the college man. And the college woman will not lag very far behind the man. Really, something ought to be done about the growing interest in athletics at our schools.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING.

There was a special meeting of the Board of Trade held Tuesday evening at Odd Fellows hall, President Vesper in the chair. A number of the ladies of the Tuesday Afternoon Club were present on invitation of the board. The principal business of the meeting was to take steps for providing a rest place at Glendale avenue and fourth street for the visitors who are daily brought to Glendale by the new electric railroad via Eagle Rock. Mr. H. P. Coker, chairman of the committee, appointed at the last meeting to take charge of the matter, reported progress and presented plans of the proposed pavilion to be erected. The estimated cost was $375 and a discussion of ways and means followed and the work of providing the funds for the purpose was turned over to a committee consisting of Messrs. F. R. Sinclair, L. H. Hurt and J. C. Sherer. Mr. E. B. Valentine addressed the board in regard to the concert which he proposes to give for the purpose of raising funds for the pavilion. He agrees to furnish an orchestra of twenty-five pieces from Los Angeles and to give an entertainment which shall be equal to anything of the kind that has been given in Glendale. The performance will take place in the new opera house, in the Filger block, on May 6th.

The board adjourned to meet next Monday evening, April 26th, after unanimously resolving that the ladies of the Tuesday Afternoon Club be made honorary members of the board.

THIRD MONDAY.

The Third Monday as observed by the "Maids and Matrons" at the Country Club was a top notch little affair, which resolved itself into a really pretty spring picture. The well-known beauty of the club rooms formed an enchanting setting for spring gowns and hats, and great bowls of California poppies on mantle, piano and tables added to the kaleidoscopic effect. Mrs. Burt Richardson was hostess as assisted by Mr. J. N. Metcalf and Mrs. V. Price Brown, each charmingly dressed. Whist was enjoyed and hearts were trumps. The first award fell to Mrs. E. V. Parker. The prize was a handsome piece of Mexican drawn work. At the close of the spirited game, delicious ices and home-made cakes were served.

OF UNUSUAL INTEREST.

The Presbyterian manse on Tuesday afternoon was the scene of an extremely interesting meeting and missionary tea. Mrs. Harrison as president of the missionary society, assisted Mrs. S. Lawrence Ward in receiving. The address was given by Mrs. Jeanette Henderson of Immanuel church, Los Angeles. Quite a number of strangers were present and the house was well-filled with guests. During the social hour dainty refreshments were discussed.

The object of the fair is to raise the funds necessary for the erection of a priest's house adjoining the church.

THE VILLAGE POSTOFFICE.

The ladies of St. Marks Guild will present this play at the Guild hall on Third street, May 18th and 19th next. Nearly all the dramatic talent of Glendale and vicinity and a good proportion of that in Los Angeles has been secured for this performance. So many stars are to appear in the cast that it actually promises to be a dark night elsewhere. Full particulars will appear in subsequent issues unless the city authorities interfere.

IMPORTANT MEETING.

Members of the Tuesday Afternoon Club are earnestly requested to be present at Odd Fellows Hall, at 2:30 sharp. An interesting program will follow a business meeting of importance. Miss Penn will give a talk on England and "Tennyson;" the scope of the poet's writings will be interpreted by ballad, poems and lyrics. THE SOLAR FAMILY CIRCLE.

Interesting News.

A modern text book of astronomy states that there are eight known planets. In the order of their distance from the sun they are Mercury, Venus, the Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune. The first six have been known from time immemorial. Uranus was discovered by Herschel in 1781 while engaged in examining every object within range of his telescope. The discovery of Neptune was an achievement of great scientific and even popular interest, from the fact that it resulted from a combination of delicate and extensive observations on the movements of the planet Uranus, and an elaborate and exhaustive series of calculations to account for discrepancies between the computed and observed positions of the latter planet. Uranus takes 84 years to complete his orbit round the sun, so from the time he was discovered it would not be till the year 1865 that he would have completed one revolution. Nevertheless by the year 1820 it was found that he was not following the computed path. All the world knows of the brilliant works of the English mathematician Adams, and of the French astronomer Leverrier which resulted in adding another member to the solar system. That was in the year 1846. Neptune was found to travel an immense orbit requiring nearly 165 years for its accomplishment, so it will be the year A.D. 2011 before it gets once round the sun since its discovery.

Almost all the planets are attended by satellites. Mercury and Venus being without moons so far as we can tell. There appears to be a kind of adaptation to necessity in the fact that the planets more removed from the sun are provided with moons, while those nearer the source of light do not need them. Thus the earth, third planet in order outward from the sun, has one moon, Mars has two, though probably they are only a few miles in diameter, and on that account it was long supposed that the planet was unattended. Jupiter was long supposed to have only four moons, but by the refinements of modern observation three others have been added to the quartet of Galileo. Saturn, the next planet, outwards, is now known to have ten satellites, one of which is larger than the planet Mercury, and two of which are very small. As far as we know at present Uranus has four satellites and Neptune only one, but it is highly probable that both these planets have many more attendants, which however have escaped our observation on account of their immense distance from us.

In addition to these eight planets there are a great number of small ones, usually called planetoids, which revolve round the sun between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. For a long time the great gap between these two planets puzzled astronomers and toward the close of the eighteenth century the conviction became strong that an undiscovered planet must be there somewhere, and a systematic search was organized in 1800 by six noted astronomers of that day. Just as they were about to begin observations the announcement reached them that the Italian astronomer, Piazzi, at Palermo had discovered the suspected planet on January 1, 1801. He named it Ceres after the tutelary goddess of Italy. After the discovery had been made, but before the news of it had reached Germany, the philosopher Hegel is said to have published a dissertation showing that there were no unknown planets and commenting on the folly of searching for them. A parallel case of Galileo and the Roman Fathers. Within the next few years three other planetoids were discovered, but after that fifteen years elapsed before the continued search was rewarded by another find. We shall return to this interesting subject in another paper, but up to the present time over two hundred of these little worlds have been identified and it is said that every month fresh members are added to the list.

Notwithstanding the continued discovery of asteroids and satellites, it will be seen that no important addition has been made to the number of planets revolving round the sun since 1846 when Neptune was found, but it has long been an interesting question whether there are large planets still more remote from the sun than Neptune.

There are two kinds of indications which seem to point to a probability of the existence of one or more such planets. One is the "capture" theory of comets. Saturn has a known comet family of two; Uranus a family of three, and Neptune a family of six. And there are some comets that travel to points twice the distance of the orbit of Neptune from the sun, suggesting the existence of a planet at that distance whose sway it obeys. The other indication consists in the observed disagreement of positions of Neptune with those calculated, thus repeating the method used in the discovery of the latter planet. From the "comet indication" Forbes of Edinburgh in 1880 thought it probable that there are two of these remote members of the solar family at distances of 100 and 300 times the distance of the earth from the sun. From the "perturbation indication" D. P. Todd of the Nautical Almanac bureau in Washington, concluded that there is probably a planet revolving at about 50 times the distance of the earth from the sun, and completing its orbit in about 375 years. Of course, both these assumptions are only scientific guesses; but now comes a most interesting announcement from Paris. As reported in "Science," a weekly journal published in the interest of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Monsieur Galliot, the French astronomer, announced to the Academy of Sciences in Paris on March 22 that he had "discovered" two new planets situated beyond the plane of Neptune. He estimated that one was 45 times, and the other 60 times the distance of the earth from the sun, or 4181 million and 5580 million miles respectively. No details of the alleged "discovery" have yet reached us, and further information is awaited with almost breathless interest, but should it be confirmed it will be considered the most wonderful astronomical discovery of the twentieth century.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. Dr. Linscott for the International Newspaper Bible Study Club.

April 25th, 1909.

(Copyright, 1908, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)
The Gospel in Antioch—Acts xi:19-30; xii:25.

Golden Text—The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. Acts xi:26.

Verses 19-20—Who were they that were "scattered abroad?"

Had these men any authority from the church to preach? (See Acts viii:4.)

Is it the duty of every Christian to preach Christ, whether or not he has been appointed by the Church to do so?

Is it possible to enjoy the fullness of God's love, and never say a word about it?

Are good people liable to be narrow in their views?

Are persecutions and all sorts of trouble, always helpful to the children of God?

Some of these disciples seem to have been narrow, and preached to Jews only; others being broader, preached to the Greeks also, what made the difference in these men?

Which is the greater power to broaden our views, and make us love everybody; our environment, or sinking deeper and rising higher in the love of God?

Verses 21—Whether a man is narrow or broad, if he only preaches Jesus, will God use him to extend his kingdom?

Are any efforts to extend the kingdom of God ever in vain?

Verses 22—Did the news that Antioch had received the word of God give the church at Jerusalem joy or sorrow?

What news is the most joyous either to an individual Christian, or to a Church?

What was the purpose of sending Barnabas?

Verses 23-24—What sort of a man was Barnabas?

Is it necessary, or not, to be filled with the Holy Ghost, in order to make converts, or to comfort the children of God, and are these results always attained in the ministry of a man filled with the Holy Ghost? (This question must be answered in writing by members of the Club.)

Do we exhort one another as much as we should, to "elevate unto the Lord?"

Are half-hearted people well pleasing to God?

Verses 25-26—Why did Barnabas start off to Tarsus to seek Saul?

Does it frequently happen that two holy men can do much more together, than they could do working apart?

Where were the disciples of Jesus first called Christians?

What had Christ's followers been called previous to being called Christians?

Verses 27-28—Is the gift of prophecy, that is telling future events, given to any person today?

Verses 29-30—Should the church of Christ today be a practical brotherhood, caring for one another, and helping each other financially, and in every other way, as the need may be?

Should not the church be doing for its members the work now being done by fraternal societies?

Chapter xi:25—Barnabas and Saul took the contributions from Antioch up to Jerusalem to relieve the need there, and then returned; was it just as noble work as, if they had been up there preaching?

A Study in Anatomy.

The brain is the headquarters of the nervous system and contains the central offices of the Anatomical Telephone company.

When the suburban nerve center says, "Hello, central," the brain either replies "What number?" or "Busy" or "Out of order," as the case may be.

Sometimes the wires are crossed and the company fails to declare any dividends, thus placing the entire brain in the hands of a receiver.

From the brain issues the spine, which is sometimes useful in matrimony, although rarely strong enough in man for practical purposes and constantly growing weaker the longer he is married.

On top of the head the hair grows, or is supposed to. In some cases, however, it fails to grow despite the most painstaking efforts.

In ladies there are two kinds of hair—viz., the imported and domestic. In gentlemen also two kinds—namely, permanent and transient. The permanent is seen in wild men, the transient in civilized men when young.

At one time all the hairs were carefully numbered, but the practice has been discontinued owing to great pressure of other matters.—Lippincott's.

The Father Pipefish.

"The best of fathers is the pipefish," said an angler. "He hatches the little pipefish, and after they are hatched he carries them about with him till they can take care of themselves."

"This fish has under his tail a sac. In it he bears the pipefish spawn. Thus the spawn hatch in perfect safety. They are not decimated, like the other fish spawn lying unprotected on the bottom of the sea, by every hungry passerby. No; they all hatch, every one of them."

As soon as they hatch the father fish splits, or nature splits for him, the sac, and all the little fish drop out into the sea, but they cling to papa. Wherever he goes, like a gray cloud those thousands of tiny sons and daughters surround him, and on the approach of danger they pop back again into the sac just as baby kangaroos pop into the sac, or marsupial pouch, of their mamma.

"The male pipefish is, in fact, the female kangaroo of the sea."

Wills and Edmund Kean.

Irving used to tell with dramatic effect a story about W. G. Wills, the dramatist, who, among other services, wrote for him the play "Charles I." When Wills was a boy ten years old he was taken to see Edmund Kean play Macbeth. In the murder scene he was so affected by the realistic power of the actor, that seized with a severe attack of nausea, he hurried from the box. Ten years later he was lunching at a chop house in Fleet street when a man entered, sat down at a table near him and ordered a meal. He was a perfect stranger to Wills, who, after a few minutes' prolixity, was again seized with a fit of nausea, from which he had not suffered since as a boy he was at the theater on the occasion mentioned. He was obliged to leave the room. When some minutes later he paid his bill the waiter said to him: "Did you see that gentleman at the table near you? That's Edmund Kean!"—H. W. Lucy in Cornhill Magazine.

An Anticlimax.

"I just dropped in to thank you for that medicine you sent home by my wife last night," said the grateful patient, grasping the doctor warmly by the hand. "I've been laid up off, and on for years, have tried all the patent medicines on the market and been treated by every doctor in the neighborhood, but your medicine was the only thing that ever did me any good."

"It's a pleasure to have you come here to tell me this," replied the doctor, highly elated. "Most of my patients are not so thoughtful. But that prescription is my pet favorite, and I never yet knew it to fail to cure a cough if taken in time."

"Cough?" echoed the patient. "Why, I didn't take it for my cold. I used it as a liniment for my rheumatism."

A Thrifty Hungarian.

A certain Hungarian peasant named Jan Hirsch made a business trip to Budapest, and while there he had the idea of ordering a hundred visiting cards. When he returned home he found, to his dismay, that the cards bore the name of Mavisch instead of Hirsch. It was only a printer's error, but to Jan Hirsch it meant a loss of a shilling and sixpence unless he could make use of the cards. He accordingly purchased for the sum of a shilling an official form of petition and filled it with a request to be allowed to alter his name to Mavisch. His prayer was granted. He is now Jan Mavisch—London News.

Direct Answers.

The negroes of Africa are simple and direct in speech. It never occurs to them, writes Mr. R. H. Milligan in "The Jungle Book In Africa," that the purpose of language is to conceal thought, and to commiserate the African for his color is a waste of sympathy. In illustration of this Mr. Milligan gives an amusing conversation with one of his pupils. One day when I was talking to Bojedi something in the course of the conversation prompted me to ask him whether he would like to be a white man. He replied respectfully but emphatically in the negative. I wished to know his reason. He hesitated to tell me, but I was insistent, and at last he replied:

"Well, we think that we are better looking."

I gasped when I thought of the vastly ill looking faces I had seen in the jungles, and in apology for myself I said:

"But you have not seen us in our own country, where there is no malaria and where we are not yellow and green."

He quietly asked what color we were in our own country, to which I promptly replied, "Pink and white."

Looking at me steadily for a moment, he remarked:

"Mr. Milligan, if I should see you in your own country I don't believe I should know you."

Long Winded Preachers.

Dean Lefroy, who expressed the opinion that ten minutes is long enough for a sermon, would have met with scant sympathy from some divines of past centuries, says the Westminster Gazette.

Thomas Hooker considered three hours a fair average allowance for a sermon, though, on one occasion, when he was ill, he let his congregation off more lightly. Pausing at the end of fifteen minutes, he rested awhile and then continued his homily for two hours longer. Cranmer's sermons were each a small book when set up in type. And Baxter, Knox, Bunyan and Calvin rarely reached "Lastly, my brethren," under two hours.

George Herbert once said: "The person exceeds not an hour in preaching, because all ages have thought that competency," but a certain rector of Bilbury, Gloucestershire, was of another opinion, for he never sat down under two hours. The squire, we learn, usually withdrew after the text was announced, smoked his pipe outside and returned for the blessing.

Revenge in Ceylon.

A system of Cingalese "black magic" peculiar to the island is still practiced in some parts of Ceylon. It is stated that there are 4,400 different methods of causing ill to others. Here is a translation of one of these methods of dealing with your enemy:

"On Sunday eleven peya"—one peya equals twenty-four English minutes—"after sunrise Yama Devi"—the god of death and judgment—"goes to the west. Start at this hour; take a meal of bluish rice; dress in red colored garments.

"Take a root of ginger at the time of the zodiac of Aries; write on it the name of your rival, charm it 108 times, wrap it in a golden colored cloth and place it in your waist.

"When you meet your rival, look straight into his face and break the root in your hand. Within nine peyas he will be killed by an elephant, and when seven months elapse six other persons of his family will meet their doom."—Ceylon National Review.

A Gale by Another Name.

Doubtless there were many puzzled readers when a deep sea skipper rolled into this harbor a few days ago and reported that his ship had been belated by a gale which had piped up to "force 10." "Force 10," it was explained, meant something like a hurricane. It is a term borrowed from the Beaufort scale, a scheme of wind measurements devised by the British admiral Beaufort before the days of ocean going steam. Force 1 was a calm, force 2 a light breeze, and so on up to the hurricane velocity. Perhaps, too, the Beaufort scale may give a clew to those who have been wondering for some time at the title of a popular German picture. It is just one expanse of frowning cloud and storm tossed bellow, and the artist has named it "windstarker 10, 11."—New York Sun.

Digging For Money.

The honest workman was engaged in excavating operations—i. e., he was digging. The stray wayfarer of the inquisitive turn of mind stopped for a moment to look on.

"My man," said the S. W. at length, "what are you digging for?"

The H. W. looked up.

"Money," he replied.

"Money?" ejaculated the amazed S. W. "And when do you expect to strike it?"

"Saturday," replied the H. W. and resumed operations.

Wasted Effort.

Kind Old Lady (talking to a tramp)—Have you ever made an effort to get work?

Tramp—Yes, ma'am. Last month I got work for two members of my family, but neither of them would take it. —London Telegraph.

His Periodical.

"Do you take any periodicals?" asked the new clergyman on his first round of parish visits.

"Well, I don't," replied the woman, "but my husband takes 'em frequent. I do wish you'd try to get him to sign the pledge!"

We do not know how cheap the seeds of happiness are or we should scatter them oftener.—Lowell.

A Busy Holiday.

"Naw, I don't think Timmy'll be stayin' long on this new job he's took up wid," said Mrs. Herlihy. "'Tis too hard for him. Sure, he gets no rest at all from Monday mornin' till Saturday night, and 'tis not what the man's used to."

"He has his Sundays to rest in," hazarded the caller boldly.

"An' what o' that?" said Mrs. Herlihy. "On Sunday he has to go to church an' take the children to their grandma's an' visit wid his cousins all 'll—'tis no rest at all."

"'Twas wan day out of every fortnight he had wid the old job, wa'n't it?" queried the caller.

"It was," said Mrs. Herlihy. "an' 'twas a grand vacation he had. 'I'd save every bit of the washin', and he'd wring it out fine an' hang it on the line for me; thin he'd saw an' split wood enough to last till the next vacation day, an' he'd bathe every mat in the house an' shine up the faucets an' the blier an' wash the windys, an' there'd always be some little extra help drivin' nailin' or the like, he cut give me."

"An' whin he'd go to his bed at night he'd never fail to say to me, 'Well, Celia, my vacation day is over, but I feel like it's made me ready to go back to work tomorrow,' he'd say."—Youth's Companion.

A Great Mystery.

There is one great mystery in God's universe—somewhere flows a fountain of life, where is one of God's secrets. How far its waters flow we cannot tell. No human feet have tracked its streams in their wanderings. The Father has decreed that we must drink of it to live, and yet he blinds our eyes with sleep before he lets us drink. When we awake the strength of the stream is in us, and so we make the journey of the day. And the strange waters have strange powers. Soul darkness and despair are melted in them; fear and trouble shrivel; hope and strength are held in sweet solution in their wakes. Worn and weary with the care and fret, closing her eyes as the tired lids fall in the gloom of night, the faint mother slips into the stream of sleep, and then in a little while the morning comes, and a new woman looks out upon the day with the secret of a new creation in her soul, new power and courage born of the waters of life.—Sturgis (Ky.) News-Democrat.

"Humble Pie."

Originally the term "humble pie" carried no opprobrious meaning. The pie was one made out of the "humble" or "numbles" from the Norman French "nombres"—i. e., the entrails of a deer. To this day it is highly esteemed in Scotland and in northern parts of England. So late as the time of Pepys "umble pie" was served as part of the menu of a gentleman's table on an extraordinary occasion. Some writers derive the contumelious use of the phrase "to eat humble pie" from an alleged custom of serving "umble pie" below the salt, or at the second table. But this is not supported by authority. It more probably came into use simply through the similarity of sound, there being no similarity of meaning whatever between the noun "umbles" or "numbles" and the adjective "humble."

The Law of Gravitation.

In 1609—seventy-seven years before the publication of Newton's "Principia"—Shakespeare in the play of "Troilus and Cressida," act 4, scene 2, makes one of his characters say:

"Do to this body what extremity you can. But the strong base and building of my love

Is as the very center of the earth. Drawing all things to it."

This would seem to look very like the announcement of the law of gravity, and yet nothing can possibly be truer than the fact that the great poet did not in any substantial sense anticipate the philosopher. Between Shakespeare's fancy and the scientific triumph of Newton there is an infinite difference.—New York American.

Moral Courage.

A schoolteacher once told her class that the courage which makes us do what we think right, regardless of the sneers of others, was moral courage, the best kind.

"Then if a boy has a box of candy, like me yesterday," said a lad, "and if he eats it all himself, without giving any to people that have no right to it, no matter how much they call him mean and stingy, that's moral courage, ain't it, teacher?"

The Time Not Ripe.

Anxious Patron—Doctor, don't you think you'd better call in some other physicians for consultation? Family Doctor (cheerfully)—Oh, no; not yet. There is still some hope.—New York Weekly.

Endurance Test.

"What do they mean by an endurance test?"

"Two chaps bragging about their respective makes of automobile."—Louville Courier-Journal.

Gallant.

Beautiful Widow—Do you know, I'm forty years old today?

Gallant Bachelor—Madam, you are twenty. I never believe more than half of what I hear.

Corrected.

Miss Kitty—Before you were married, Mrs. Blunt, did your husband bring you many flowers? Mrs. Blunt—I didn't have any husband before I was married, dear.

Pessimism.

Pessimism leads to weakness; optimism leads to power.—William James.

Queer Life in Johannesburg.

Here is an amusing description of queer life in a Johannesburg residential block: "Nearly every one has one room, and into this you cram nearly all your worldly possessions and learn all kinds of vanishing tricks and juggling feats, such as having a combination bed and piano, using your washing stand for your writing table and converting your hip bath by day with rugs and cushions into an armchair. In this abode of bliss you receive your friends, male and female, and, if the gentleman, sitting himself rashly on the bed-sofa, vanishes into the piano or the lady throws herself weakly into the hip bath armchair and it falls off the packing case—with her inside it, no one will turn a hair. You will invite them to lunch or tea or dinner, which ever is approaching, and the gentleman will offer to go and buy chops or rippers and fetch the milk and when he returns will help you cook, and you'll sit together and eat it on the washing stand, which also does duty as a dinner table on such occasions."—London Standard.

The Chief Justice.

"There are very few people who know the proper designation of the man who presides over the supreme court," said the secretary of the senate.

"Generally he is referred to as the chief justice of the United States supreme court. In fact, he is the chief justice. That's his official title. Most of our presidents in nominating men for this office have fallen into the error of giving him the long title. When George Washington nominated Oliver Ellsworth of Connecticut for this post he described it as chief justice of the supreme court of the United States. Andrew Jackson made the same error in nominating Richard B. Taney. So did Abraham Lincoln when he appointed Salmon P. Chase. Grover Cleveland was the first president to give the correct designation. When he appointed Melville W. Fuller he nominated him to be chief justice and nothing else. Future nominations will be framed in this fashion."—Washington Star.

Fifty Dollar Dinners.

"Dinners at $50 a plate are as common in New York as five dollar dinners are in London and Paris," said a chef. "Our extravagant dinners are no better than the cheaper foreign ones. Their cost is caused not by the exquisite cooking of exquisite materials, but by the use of exotic foods whose expense is their chief recommendation. What do I mean by exotic foods? Well, I mean cane sugar instead of the ordinary beet root kind for the compote; I mean wild rice instead of the cultivated for the canvas-back; I mean sole brought alive from England and sterlet from Russia, when our own native fish is better conditioned; I mean hothouse strawberries as big as apples, pears as big as cocoanuts and grapes as big as peaches, all tasting rather like raw pumpkin, but looking very fine in blizzard weather. Foolish foods; but, then, it's only foolish people who eat fifty dollar dinners."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Auctioneer's Hourglass.

An auctioneer of Philadelphia collects all sorts of objects pertaining to his ancient calling. He has, among other things, an interesting set of auctioneers' hourglasses. The auctioneer a century or so ago concluded sale not by saying "Going, going, gone!" and rattling the counter with his hammer, but it was his better method to turn up a free running glass toward the end of the bidding and to end the sale irrevocably when the sand ran out. This saved confusion and dispute. The auctioneers' glasses in the Philadelphia collection are picturesque. One is of tortoise shell and mother-of-pearl. Another is of amber and gold. A third is of teak and ivory.

Appropriate.

A clergyman went to have his teeth fixed by a dentist. When the work was done the dentist declined to accept more than a nominal fee. The parson, in return for this favor, insisted later on the dentist accepting a volume of the reverend gentleman's own writing. It was a disquisition on the Psalms, and on the fly leaf he had inscribed this appropriate quotation: "And my mouth shall show forth thy praise."—Harper's Weekly.

Gave Him a Pointer.

George Ade was once stranded in a small town. He went into the barber's shop to get shaved and endured even unto the end. When the barber had completed his operation the humorist arose and, putting a handkerchief to his face, said gravely:

"Sir, you have missed your vocation. You ought to be an oyster opener."

Never Gives Up.

"I just had to marry him. He told me he never gave up anything he loved."

"Well, it's good to have a husband who loves one."

"Y-e-s, but I have learned that he loves money also."—Houston Post.

An Impediment.

"It looks as though my marriage with Miss Mullins would be postponed."

"What's the matter, old fellow?"

"She got married to young Dobson yesterday."

Mr. and Mrs. R. Zinn Imler are building a three thousand dollar residence on Palmetto Drive, in the Palmetto tract. Mr. Imler leaves shortly for Imperial.

L. C. Rice of this place is quite ill at his home on Tropico avenue of this place suffering from a severe attack of la grippe, which threatens to develop into pneumonia.

S. J. and Guy Rice of this place took part in a concert given by the De Lano Mandolin and Guitar club at the De Lano studio on Grand avenue in Los Angeles, last Monday evening.

Mr. Joseph H. Webster of Park avenue, left last evening for El Centro, Imperial county, California, where he goes to look after his interests. He is the owner of a large ranch at that place.

Charles L. Peckham left Tuesday evening for Chicago, where he will resume his duties as insurance adjuster. Mrs. Peckham and the remainder of the family will follow before a great while.

J. P. Scott is building a five-room bungalow on his property on Glendale avenue near Depot street. The home will be very pretty and cozy when completed and will be occupied by Mr. Scott.

Davenport and Black report the purchase of a lot in the Oak Knoll tract by Rev. J. H. Henry, pastor of the Methodist church of this place. The lot faces Central avenue and the price paid was $900 cash. It is very probable that Mr. Henry will improve the property before a very distant date. This firm also reports the sale of Mrs. Brewster's house on Glendale avenue to H. A. Adams of Los Angeles. The new owner will take possession immediately. The price paid was $2200.

The funeral services of Albert Drendel, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Drendel, were held Monday afternoon from the family residence on Glendale avenue and were conducted by Rev. Father O'Neill of the Catholic church.

Interment was in Forest Lawn cemetery, whither a large concourse of sympathizing relatives and friends assembled, with many flowers and blossoms. Doubly sad is the death of baby Albert from the fact that last week Mr. and Mrs. Drendel had the sorrow and grief of attending the funeral of their cousin, Mrs. Hoffman, of Los Angeles, who was killed in an automobile accident, at Baldwin, near Los Angeles.

The I. O. G. T. lodges from Burbank, Pasadena, and Merrill Lodge of Los Angeles, will visit with the local Good Templars at the G. A. R. hall next Monday evening. The local order is making elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the visitors and they expect to have a rousing good time. It is very much desired that all of the Good Templars of the valley will be present and assist in receiving the visiting lodges. The boys of the Tropico lodge are preparing a play which they expect to give in the near future. They are hoping that they may have the patronage of all the Tropico and Glendale people on this occasion. The local order is having a hard fight to pull themselves out of the financial difficulty which they are in, but the promoters are confident they will succeed.

PICTURES FROM GERMANY.

Gift of Lake View Woman's Club of Chicago.

Pictures have arrived from Germany as a gift to the new Sixth street school and are presented through the principal, Miss Ida M. Waite, through whose efforts the copies were obtained.

Seven of them are for the primary department and comprise a madonna and pictures of interest to the little ones.

Among the others is "Joan d'Arc" and "The Meeting of the Masters," the latter hardly obtainable again.

"The Gargoyle," from the tower of Notre Dame, "The Fountain," "Mowers," are all copies of masters in the Berlin art galleries, twenty-one in all.

This week an addition was made to the valuable collection. In recognition of work formerly done by Miss Waite in placing in the Chicago schools rare pictures and two bronzes used in the child department of the World's Fair.

The Chicago Lake View Woman's Club sends as a gift to the Glendale school an exquisite water color. Also two originals by Ralph Wilder, sketches that were used on Chicago daily papers. Miss Waite intends to plan some little school affair whereby the children might exhibit these art treasures, in the hope that parents and patrons will become interested in proper framing for them.

A GENUINE SURPRISE.

As pleasant as it was genuine was the surprise of Rev. J. W. Utter, last Friday night, when he opened the door of his new home and discovered on the broad veranda about seventy-five loyal friends and parishioners of the First Christian church. As the figure of the beloved pastor stood outlined in the doorway, the gentleman uncovered, and all sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds Our Hearts in Christian Love."

There followed a good old-fashioned house warming when song and story preceded the serving of good home-made cakes and regular "made-in-California" fruitade. In the early evening many of the friends gathered at the home of Mr. Shropshire. They enjoyed a hay wagon ride to the G. A. R. hall, where Tropic friends joined them and all proceeded to the home. The evening was entirely informal. Readings were given by Miss Shropshire and Mrs. Dahof and musical numbers were furnished by the company.
